A Message from Chairman, John D. Myers

WHOSE CHILDREN ARE THESE ANYWAY?

I started school in 1949 at Providence Park Elementary School in Richmond, Virginia. Although it was a part of the Richmond Public School System, the building was a three-room wooden structure, with pot-bellied wooden stoves for heat in the winter, and windows that could be opened for hot weather days. The teachers had to get there early in the morning on cold days to start fires in their classroom stoves, and boys would be assigned to go out the coal house to fill the scuttle with coal throughout the day to keep the rooms heated (I managed to get a photo of the school from the Archives at the Virginia Library). There were bathrooms with running water and flushable toilets, but they were in a separate building, constructed well after the school was built when there was no public water or sewers. By the way, in those days there as a girl's bathroom and a boy's bathroom, and no such thing as transgender this or that.

Do not think I am complaining about my humble education beginnings. I am truly thankful for the strong education I received during the days the City of Richmond had not yet become a big joke and shame. This was during the days of segregation and the teachers were dedicated to making the future of black children better through education. The teaching of basics was essential, and while the term "No child left behind" was not used until many, many years later during the Bush 43 administration, educating every child every child was the missive of those teachers. Not one child was promoted without meeting the requirements of their current grade. Another thing, black teachers were paid less than unskilled laborers at the time, due to a different salary scale from white teachers. Those were truly dedicated people.

Many black people in my generation, educated in the Richmond Public Schools in the 1940's through the 1960's, went on to become medical doctors, scientists, engineers, lawyers, politicians, college professors, teachers, school administrators and other professions. To this day, I have yet to hear even one of them claim that segregation, or the statues of Confederate Generals previously adorning Monument Avenue, negatively affected their future. Even during the dark days of racial segregation, those who wished for a better future could achieve it through hard work and determination.

So where are we today? What are the goals and objectives for those in charge of our public schools today? Are schools better or worse than they were in the 1950's? I say these questions are matters of opinion. There are no wooden three-room public schools with pot-bellied stoves in use today anywhere in America as far as I know.

Technology has increased geometrically since then, so what is taught now covers a far greater amount of knowledge than that which was covered then. So, are the objectives still valid? Are we educating young minds, and teaching them how to think, or are we indoctrinating them and teaching them what to think? Let me begin with this, recent surveys showed that 87% of U.S. High School teachers consider themselves liberal or progressive and 91% of U.S. college professors claim to be liberal or progressive politically. Does their political ideology manifest itself in the classrooms? The answer is unequivocally YES!

Now here is where I “go off the rail” a bit. I, as well as many other people here in our country, believe that there is an organized left-wing effort to bring Socialism, and eventually Communism, to the United States of America. If we take a look at how the progressives both in our Virginia General Assembly, our current shame of a Governor, the Progressives in both houses of Congress and the brainless, propped-up puppet known as Biden all look at the role of government in our lives, it will become obvious. Given a choice of letting our citizens make their own decisions, or having government do it for them, they will always choose the latter. Given a choice of citizens having control of their own resources, or the government’s great “expertise” in managing finances, they would side with government. And so, it is with our children’s and grandchildren’s education. Do our citizens, the parents, or the government have the absolute authority on what they will be taught, and how they will be taught? Again, the progressives choose government. The more power the government has over decision making, the less power, and freedoms will the citizens have.

So why are they so anxious to dictate what children are taught? It is simply because if you want to change the attitudes, values, and beliefs of an entire country, especially one in which its citizens have enjoyed liberty for over 200 years, you have to start somewhere. And what better place is there to start than with fresh young minds which can be easily molded to think anyway that you wish. To the Leftists, children are low hanging fruit, easy for the picking. If you want them to think America is evil and founded on false principles, that’s what you teach. If you want to destroy any sense of morality, begin putting pornography in the schools (yes, it has been found in schools, even here in Goochland). If you want to show that Socialism is the way to go, educate them on the “evils” of Capitalism.

Now don’t think that the Leftists are willing to wait until these children are grown and old enough to vote in order for them to have their way.

The current slate of Commies has become impatient. Their plan had to be accelerated. The parents have to be included in the plot. The Leftists have in their arsenal a variety of weapons. One of the most effective is “Divide and conquer.” A nation divided is a nation made weaker. We are systematically being divided by race, religion, nationality, socioeconomic status, regions of the country, age, sex, and of course sexual orientation. It is by design, not by accident that Black Lives Matter is not only funded by left-wing billionaires, but allowed to burn down cities with immunity. It is by design, not by accident, that attacks on Christians and Jews are almost ignored. It is by design, not by accident that “political correctness” always elevates groups favored by the Left. It is by design, not by accident, that being financially successful is considered evil (unless your name is Soros, Zuckerberg, Bezos, Bloomberg, Steyer, etc.). I could go on and on here.

Now back to the schools. How do these Leftists get control of our schools here in Virginia? Well, the short answer is that the nine members of the Virginia Board of Education are selected by the Governor. Since the current excuse for a human being is the infamous KKK-Blackface-Commie currently occupying the Governor’s Mansion on Capital Square in Richmond is a far-left Democrat, the Board makeup is naturally like-minded people. However, that is not the full picture. Local school boards are made up of elected people, and tend to reflect the values of the voters in their districts. Naturally, more conservative localities get conservative school boards, and more liberal localities get more liberal school boards. One would think that the children that are under the more conservative school boards would receive a fairer educational experience. Not so much! Keep in mind that the Virginia Board of Education gets to make up the rules, and the rules currently dictate garbage like equity and transgender bathrooms. What about Critical Race Theory? Don't understand it? I can summarize it in two sentences. Black people are stupid and weak, and are therefore victims. White people are smart and strong, and are therefore aggressors. And while the controversial subject of CRT is not officially included in the Virginia Board of Education Curriculum, if you think it is not being taught to our children in some public schools, I will give you a great deal on the Route 522 Bridge over the James River connecting Goochland and Powhatan. Cash only please!

Last weekend I attended the Annual Republican Advance at the Omni Homestead in Hot Springs, VA. In a Saturday morning breakout session, a member of the Loudon County School Board gave an example of the kind of methods used to include CRT in the classroom. She stated, and I am somewhat paraphrasing, "in a math class we were formerly taught that six plus four equals ten, period. Now it would be if there are six white children in the classroom, and four black children, how many children would need to be changed in order for there to be an equal number?" Did your elementary school math class have such ludicrous examples? This is the type of insanity that had parents in a highly Democratic County up in arms. Until they were stuck at home with their children during the COVID-19 closedown, and assisting with their kid's online learning, did they become aware of what was going on. Even Liberals have limits on their stupidity!

To top things off, in a televised debate between Virginia gubernatorial candidates Glenn Youngkin and Terry McAuliff, one of the questions put forth was if parents should have a role in what is taught to their children. Mr. McAuliff's answer (and I quote FDR, a famous Liberal Democrat) will go down in infamy. "I don't think that parents should be telling teachers what to teach." Whose children are these anyway? Enough said!

A Message from Vice Chair, Buddy Bishop

If you were to think of who might be the greatest patriot you know in your personal life, what name comes to mind? I'm talking about people you personally know or have known; people who have either influenced you or deeply impress you in an enduring way.

What if, there were people you know right now that are in fact exemplary patriots – but you don't know it? Moreover, they don't know it about you?

I'm talking about people you have met along the way. People that don't live in the same area you do, or people that do, but don't not show up at GOP functions or Tea Party meetings, etc.

So, my brother Brian mentioned to me the other day in a phone call, that he went with his wife to a funeral for a guy that was married to a woman who is active in dog agility competitions. Brian's wife Tracy and the woman knew each other from the various competition events they'd attend and participate in.

Brian had met the deceased only once in 2013. He recalled him as an engaging person with a keen mind and a terrific sense of humor but hadn't encountered him since. At the funeral, one of the displays was a table of books that was of selected titles the now deceased man had valued. One of these caught Brian's attention – "Defending the Constitution: Alan Dershowitz's Senate Argument Against Impeachment".

The eulogies that were related during the service clinched Brian's realization that this guy, the one being mourned, was a conservative patriot. The thing that stung a bit was that Brian didn't know it. During the eight years when they first met, the deceased didn't know it about Brian either. Brian regretfully thought of what they could have done with those years.

Of course, we all have friends that aren't patriots. It's not a prerequisite generally. I also realize, that patriots don't always automatically like each other personally. But, one thing can be relied on – any point of contention between patriots has little or nothing to do with the ideology of the Republic. Our common bond of reverence for the American Republic is the greatest connection we have for the ultimate good our endeavors. I listened as Brian related his regret that "if he had only known" ...

Take our fellow committee member Stan Corn. He has typically been wearing his MAGA hat throughout and in doing so making an outward unquestionable indication of his mindset. I've admired him regarding that and I appreciate it. His example and my brothers experience lead up to essentially one thing: Our public and bold assertions, our outward manner of self-presentation regarding one of the most important things for present time and our future - The Republic - isn't so much for ourselves only. It's especially for others too. Others that could benefit from understanding it about us and being encouraged that they are not alone.

Congressional, Virginia Senate and Virginia House Redistricting

The special masters have submitted their combined maps to the Virginia Supreme Court ahead of their December 19th due date. There is a combined (Republican and Democrat) map for the Congressional districts, the Virginia Senate, and the Virginia House of Delegates.

Keep in mind that these maps are NOT FINAL, but they sure are interesting. We will share what we know at the meeting. From Republican Party of Virginia legal counsel:

Memo Submitted by Special Masters \(pdf\)

Please note that these are the submissions of the special masters. The Court has taken no action. Nor has it announced how it will proceed now that it has the special masters' recommendation.

As you will note if you click on any of the interactive links above, they are on the Redistricting Commission's comment website. Presumably, the Court will take comments posted online on these specific maps. It is unclear what else the Court may do before taking any action to change or adopt these drafts as the new districts. It's also unclear when it may do so.

I continue to believe that planning for maps to be finalized in early January is a prudent course, but it's become a little bit more likely that the Court may finish its work in December. Unfortunately, the Court has not made available the type of files required to analyze these new districts in GIS software to examine election results data by the new districts, but I'm sure that will become available soon.

Goochland County Redistricting Meetings

Every locality is also redrawing local election districts. The proposed maps will become available on January 5th and multiple community meetings are planned to receive input from the public.

January 5	4:00pm	County Administration Building
January 5	6:30pm	County Administration Building
January 10	6:30pm	Hope Church
January 12	6:30pm	Byrd Elementary School
January 20	6:30pm	Salem Baptist Church
